

Murray's Cheese Shop Ups Its Own Lunch Game

Carey Jones for Serious Eats July 7, 2009

It stands to reason that a superior cheese shop should serve a superior cheese sandwich. And Murray's Cheese Shop has long had an excellent sandwich counter. But they've really outdone themselves with Murray's Melts—a design-your-own grilled cheese bar that lets you really take advantage of their tremendous fromage selection.

Start with bread from Blue Ribbon Bakery (white, wheat, or rye) or Eli's Bread (a dense, grainy Health Loaf). Take your pick of fourteen different cheeses—from a young Manchego to a glossy Taleggio to a double crème brie. That's your base sandwich, for $3.99. But things get exciting with the extras: Jamón Serrano, sautéed mushrooms, or a fig and onion jam. It's quite an impressive list.
